I urge you to enact legislation to force utilities to use net metering for individuals who generate electricity. While this is probably a small percentage of the total electricity consumed and generated in the country, it does reduce our dependency on fossil fuels. Enacting an incentive for people to produce their own electricity could have an effect on the number of people who put generators into use. The current model is based on a small number of large producers, and a large point source pollution. Net metering would encourage a distributed power source with lower emissions and lower transmission loss. At worst, we should not discourage people from entering this market.
